

5R Chow Wan Lam, Jaantje

A Silly Robbery

In Israel, a man robbed two banks with an avocado. Can you believe it?

A 47-year-old resident of southern Israel is facing charges of aggravated robbery after successfully stealing nearly NLS 30,000 from two Beersheba banks last month - using an avocado. The robber was from a village near the southern metropolis. He entered a bank at the Big Beersheba shopping mall and handed the cashier a misspelled note demanding her to hand over the cash at her counter. On the note was written, 'Hand over the money'. Attention was drawn to the round, blank object he was holding in his right hand. He claimed that it was a grenade, but later turned out to be an avocado he had painted black.

In my opinion, I think the cashier and the security guard are both silly. They couldn't tell the difference between an avocado and a grenade.

A Robbery

Last Thursday evening, there was a robbery at Moon Restaurant. The crime happened at seven forty-five in the evening. Doris was the cashier. She was playing with her phone when she heard a guy say, "Hey!" She was shocked and looked forward. She saw a robber. He said, "Give me the money!" The robber had a knife pointing at her. She was scared and she ran away, leaving the register open.

When the robber was taking the money from the cashier register, Mr. Wong set off the alarm to inform the police. The robber sped up and left quickly.

The police arrived when the robber was escaping. The police were chasing the robber when the robber got on a motorbike. The robber turned the ignition key to the on position and drove away with the police chasing behind him. The robber drove to a dead end, so he parked his motorbike and started to run into a building. The police chased after him. When he tried to climb to the first stair case, Officer Chan handcuffed him. Unfortunately, Officer Chan accidentally fell down so the robber could escape.

The robber was so stupid that he ran to the roof instead of one of the other floors. The police called more police to come and they searched the whole building to find him.

Finally, the police found the robber on the roof. The robber said, "I give up." The police arrested him and sent him to prison instantly.