

Meaningful Gifts

I have received numerous gifts from my family, my friends, teachers and classmates etc. Although they are all valuable to me, none of them, not even expensive ones, can replace the birthday card my younger brother gave me when he was only four. It was not merely a card, because it was not bought a shop but handmade by him. When I received the card, I was shocked. I never knew he would do such a kind act. I was also touched. All those years I made many cards for my friends and family, but I never received one. After that, our bond grew stronger and we loved each other much more dearly than before.

I have given many presents to my friends and family. Last year, I gave my mother a handmade rose on her birthday. I spent three hours making it. I wanted to make it for her because I wanted to show her my love and gratefulness. When she saw the rose, she was overjoyed. I felt lovely because she loved my present. I thought this was a really meaningful gift because unlike real roses it will last forever. Handmade presents may not be as beautiful as real ones but they show ultimate love and care.

Everyone loves presents. They bring not only happiness to the recipient, but also joy to the giver. If we can give more presents, especially handmade ones, to others, more people will be happy and the community would be better.

A Happy Memory With Your Family

A lot of people go camping or have a staycation in luxurious or brand- new hotels. I recommend you to go glamping because I had an amazing experience with my family at YHA Sai Kung Pak Sha O.

My family and I went to the beach nearby and built a sandcastle. After we had a barbecue, we went back to the campsite. I walked on the grass barefoot. We listened to some relaxing music and played some board games.

It started to get dark so we turned on LED lights. We went outside and stargazed. The stars were shining brightly. It was like being in a wonderland.

I have learnt that sometimes if we turn off gadgets, we can enjoy more family time. We can also stay more relaxed in a place without being surrounded by towering skyscrapers and bright lights.

It was an unforgettable experience because it was my first time stargazing. I hope I will go again on my birthday next year.
